

ME BERNHARDT ACTS AT SALT LAKE

Her Death Scene Creates a Tremendous Impression.

MANAGEMENT MARRED PLAY.

Audience Was Big and Brilliant and Receipts Ran From $2,500 To $3,000.

Salt Lake has at last enjoyed the privilege of listening to and gazing upon the famous Bernhardt, and has recorded its mixed and variegated verdict upon her powers. That verdict, if it could be compressed into a few words, would be one of respect for the traces of rare genius she still exhibits, one of pain to see an actress on whom the ravages of time are so marked, endeavoring to play a youthful role, and one of exasperation that an artist of her standing should be content with so low such stage management to bring ridicule upon her presentation.

It was inevitable, the entire dialogue being rendered in French, that the appreciation of the audience should fall short. The greater part of the gathering came out of curiosity, not with the expectation of reaping the full enjoyment that would have attended a presentation given in English, but it was something to be able to say "I have seen Bernhardt play 'Camille'."

Doubtless these present last evening, now being able to say this, feel repaid for their outlay. It did not require a knowledge of French, however, to see in Bernhardt the mistress of her art. But little of the rich voice of former days remains, but the magnetism of her manner, her personality, her grace and her individual charm, with the perfect mastery of all the technique and finesse of the modern French school noted, these are still with her and it was impossible not to feel admiration for her as these qualities were displayed. The perfection of naturalness of the keynote of the modern French style of acting, and it was this in which Bernhardt and her company excelled. It was so much the case that in the rich scenes of the play it was all like a prolonged "conversation," in which the character of Camille hardly seemed called upon to do any acting. The several big scenes in the play, however, where Camille's opportunities occurred, notably the episode with the elder Duval, the parting from Armand, the gambling scene, and greatest of all, the death scene at the close, were the points where she thoroughly shone, but it must be said, in endeavor, that the only place where she seemed to deeply impress the audience was in the death scene. Here the terrible naturalness of her work, had an effect on her listeners almost painful to behold, and if the applause did not break forth in a deluge, it was due to the depression which her vivid acting caused among her beholders. One could almost see the shadows of dissolution passing over her countenance.

It is the tremendous effect she produces in this dying scene that justifies her in retaining "Camille" in her repertoire. In the other scenes of the play, the difference between what Camille should have been and what Bernhardt is, is too marked to make the delineation agreeable. In the death scene, however, there was little in the presentation to create interest. It is impossible not to feel disappointment that the famous French actress should not have presented us with a group of ladies, especially in the ballroom scene, whose looks and dresses reflected something of Parisian beauty and style. Truth compels the statement that the supporting company belongs decidedly in the mediocre class. The Armand Duval, while not a bad actor, would be ranked as one of an average leading man in the second grade stock companies in America, and hardly any of the others are deserving of more than passing mention. As for the stage management, which showed one set of battered and dingy scenery to do service for Camille's drawingroom, Armand's country home, the gilded ballroom, and the scene where Camille breathes her last, to say nothing of the side-splitting performances of the curtain—no words of condemnation are severe enough. How Bernhardt and her company managed to make the scene in the face of such adjuncts, it is hard to imagine, but all except Duval were seemed entirely untroubled by all their untoward surroundings. That the stage conditions were not bettered, as they might easily have been, suggests that while Bernhardt and her managers believe in Art with a big A, they are equally devoted to the Dollar with a big D.

The running of the trains, the seating arrangements, etc., were all handled in excellent fashion. It took two big trains to convey the crowd to and from the pavilion, and the scene looking out on the big and brilliant audience was one of the most imposing ever, not all the vast area of seats was occupied, and after the first act those seated in the rear of the house, moved by a common impulse, walked over the ropes and took the seats in the aisles, evidently under the impression that by a nearer view they might understand that the dialogue was about. The audience were surprised to find, in fact, that the key was in which Bernhardt pitched her voice, she could be heard at the farthest end of the pavilion. The state of the theater, north side, out of hastily improvised material gathered from the scenery and prop rooms of the Salt Lake play house, furnished an orchestra furnished charming music during the evening.

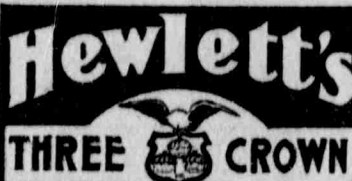

The railroad carried between 1,200 and 1,500 people, the great majority of whom paid $2 for seats. The receipts were thus from $2,500 to $3,000, a very satisfactory figure, all things considered, though one less than the Bernhardt management had hoped for, and less than they gave out to the press in advance.

At the office of the Home Fire Insurance company, Hober J. ### CONSUL STUART'S MURDER.

Russian Foreign Minister Expresses Government's Regret to Meyer.

St. Petersburg, May 22.—In response to a formal request made by Ambassador Meyer to the foreign office here on the subject of the assassination of William H. Meyer, the American vice consul at Batoum, the Russian foreign minister, Sergei D. Sazonov, received from Foreign Minister Isvolsky a note written in his own hand expressing the government's regret and stating that the vice consul of the Caucasus has been ordered to make the most rigid investigation of the crime and apprehend and punish the assassin. The note also stated that the government had given permission for the British consul at Batoum to represent American interests.

Mr. Spring-Rice, the British charge d'affaires, also sent a note to the foreign office, Mr. Stuart being a British subject, and received practically the same reply as Mr. Meyer.

Washington, May 22.—Russian officials are making every possible effort to capture the murderers of W. H. Meyer. ## MANUAL TRAINING WORK OF CHILDREN

Eight Hundred Articles Now on Exhibit at Keith-O'Brien's.

FROM THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Interesting to Note That It is by Hands Of Pupils Ranging From 10 to 15 Years of Age.

The large, south window of the Keith-O'Brien Dry Goods company on Main street is filled with some 800 articles representing the manual training work of the children in the Salt Lake public schools. It is a most creditable exhibit that is deservedly attracting much public attention, the plan being to leave the display there until next Monday, so that everybody can have a chance to see what good work Salt Lake public school children are capable of.

BY CHILDREN.
It is interesting to note that all this work is by the hands of pupils of the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades, aged 10 to 15 years; and the time spent by pupils in this work was about one hour and 10 minutes per week. Six hundred of the articles are from the boys' manual training department, and 200 are sewing exhibits from the girls.

All of the schools are represented except the Riverside and the Twelfth schools, which are having their own exhibit on this week, and it was not deemed advisable to disturb them.

WORK OF BOYS.
The boys show sleeve boards, ironing boards, towel racks—some quite elaborate clock cases and picture frames—the latter being colored in harmonious with the general tone of the pictures enclosed. There are plant boxes very substantially made which are being introduced into all the schools for window flower boxes.

Marked merit, drawing kits, cruet racks, saucer racks, drawings of various articles made and in the window, scroll work, a Roman chair that calls for special attention, colored cutlery, a fine jardiniere stand, a jewelry box by Louis Raybould of the Summer school, said to be the best article on exhibition, and a host of other things both large and small.

SEWING DISPLAY.
The sewing display shows an array that would be a credit to experienced needlewomen, and is a striking illustration of the amount of latent talent for that class of work in girls, and which can be brought out by the exercise of the needle.

The display includes a wide variety of articles of underwear for both women and children. In lace work, embroidery work, opus work, etc., after many kinds of patterns and styles. The initial letter embroidery on pillow slips and napkins is very creditably done, and is considered a good way to reach up to the higher grades of needlework. In fact, the high character of the talent shown here, is something of a pleasant surprise to many people who have not been following the progress made in the high school children in the schools.

The general manual training supervision is by Mr. D. W. Parratt, and the sewing work is under the direction of Miss Anna Corbett of Cambridge, Mass.

HORSE TRADING PUG.
Severely Trounces Unoffending Chinaman and Must Answer for It.

This morning a warrant was sworn out for the arrest of one Charles Powell on the charge of assault and battery. Powell has had more or less police notice during the past half decade, and has been in the habit of being arrested. This morning he was taken to the police station and is likely to be there for some time.

The complaint is a Mongolian named Ah Lok, who has been in the city for some time. He has been in the city for some time. He has been in the city for some time. He has been in the city for some time.

According to information at police headquarters, Ah Lok went into Powell's feed yard this morning and sat down to eat his breakfast. Powell then rushed out and tried to throw him out, and began to beat him, making the latter's face look unlike a Chinese tea sign.

Ah Lok made his way to the police station and, after a consultation with Prosecutor Daly, a warrant for Powell's arrest was issued. The horse trader will have a chance to explain matters to Judge C. B. Dichi tomorrow afternoon.

ANSWER TO SUIT.
Filed by Trustees of Town of Bingham In Injunction Case.

An answer has been filed in the district court by Antone Christensen, president, and A. G. Gabrielsen, treasurer of the board of trustees of the town of Bingham, in the injunction suit filed against the town and its officials by Fancher J. Robinson to restrain defendants from paying interest on an alleged illegal overdraft of $9,000 held by the Bingham bank. In their answer the two defendants named admit all of the allegations of the complaint and consent to have the temporary restraining order made permanent. It was alleged by plaintiff that the money borrowed from the bank by the former board of trustees of Bingham was in excess of the legal limit of the town and hence was illegal and should not be paid. The defendants agree with plaintiff on that point, and further state that they did not intend to pay the money to the bank.

COURT NOTES.

POLES ARRIVE FOR BAMBERGER ROAD

Four Carloads of Cedar Now Being Unloaded at Farmington for Line.

DOUBLE TRACK ALL THE WAY

Poles Are to Be Set Between the Two Tracks to Support the Power Wires.

President Simon Bamberger of the Salt Lake & Ogden announces that the work on electrifying the road between this city and Ogden is being pushed and by way of a preliminary four carloads of trolley wire poles are now being unloaded at Farmington. These cedar poles are part of a consignment of 2,500 ordered shipped from Sand Point, Idaho, and are to be placed at intervals between the two tracks. Work on double-tracking is now being commenced from both ends of the line. The laying of 85-lb. steel also is to be crowded in the near future.

GOOD JOB FOR CUTTING.
He Has Been Appointed Private Secretary to S. W. Eccles.

J. W. Cutting, secretary to Assistant General Freight Agent C. Ira Tuttle of the Oregon Short Line, has resigned his position to accept that of private secretary to S. W. Eccles, vice president and traffic manager of the American Smelting and Refining company. Mr. Cutting will enter upon his new duties at once and will accompany Mr. Eccles on his various trips to Mexico, the Pacific coast, New York and other points. This position was held by "Billy" Bennett who now remains at the head offices on Broadway, New York. He succeeded Harry S. Toker, who was with Mr. Eccles in the old Short Line days and now has a splendid position as representative for the big smelting concern at San Francisco.

SALINA CUT-OFF DONE.
Famous 20-Mile Grade Washed Away By Raging Mountain Torrent.

The Salina cut-off—is no more. To be more correct, the 20 miles of grade which was built four years ago and which was the means of the building of more railroads—on paper—than the railroad editors could find presidents for, has disappeared.

This is the information brought by a gentleman who has been visiting Salina. He states that with the exception of some short stretches, the entire grade has been carried away by the waters of Salina creek which have been on the rampage recently following the melting of the snow and the warm rains. Incidentally, the creek not only honeycombed the grade but also carried away the wagon bridges leaving some virgin soil for the next generation of engineers to build a cut-off between Denver and Los Angeles.

Salina's big railroad boom of 1902 has petered out and with it apparently has gone the live dream in coal properties that the road was destined to tap.

EVERY LITTLE BIT HELPS.
In addition to the rates made by the Salt Lake route to Los Angeles, the Salt Lake route has been announced a rate of $57.50 returning via Portland, Ore. A large number is expected to leave for Los Angeles June 1. See the rates for state educators.

Several of the prominent educators of the state have asked for rates to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and an effort is now being made jointly by the Salt Lake and Salt Lake City for a through excursion rate to El Tovar, the hotel situated on the rim of the Grand Canyon at Bright Angel Trail, Messrs. Warren and Burtner have taken this matter up and it is possible that one of the most unique excursions ever operated out of Salt Lake for the teachers will be run some time in the early summer.

SWITCH CAUSES TROUBLE.
A new automatic switch which is supposed to take care of four tracks out in the north yards of the Oregon Short Line has been causing all kinds of trouble since it has been installed. The San Pedro engines, especially, seem to have an aversion to this switch and are in the habit of becoming stalled at the slightest provocation. Yesterday one of these big fellows succeeded in blocking the line most effectively, making the fourth to leave the track at this point within the last few days.

J. ROSS CLARK COMING.
J. Ross Clark, vice president of the Salt Lake route, is due to arrive in Salt Lake on Thursday, where he will stay with the family of the company and go over some matters connected with contemplated improvements.

SPIKE AND RAIL.
E. Drake, district passenger agent for the Rock Island, returned from Colorado this morning.

Roy Adamson, traveling freight agent for the Rock Island, is back from an absence of two weeks at Rawlins, Wyo., on work business.

The various railroads brought in about 900 people yesterday from outside points owing to the Bernhardt excursion rates being in effect.

Frank J. Groesbeck, traveling passenger agent for the Rio Grande, returned this morning from escorting the special train of soldiers east as far as Grand Junction.

Harry S. Haskins, traveling passenger agent for the West Shore, and C. W. Smith, traveling passenger agent for the Canadian Pacific, both with headquarters in Chicago, are here taking in the sights.

ANOTHER LETTER

"Please quote me prices on same."

Quite a compliment to Utah's leading candy factory.
